People who can't talk to you five minutes without referring casually to the fact that they have been "abroad" should meet a woman who is visiting in Topeka now and who has "crossed" fifteen times.

A Topeka family (and they don't live in a Big House either) is entertaining a young woman who travels with a French maid and the quiet neighborhood where she is visiting is all wrought up over the event. Any old maid would create more than a ripple in Topeka society and the mere rumor of a maid who never materialized, once set the town agog. But now there is a real French maid actually here! Not just announced and telegraphing daily to postpone her arrival but here in the flesh! She is believed to be the first French maid who ever came to Topeka. She has a sister and a brother, the unassuming people who are related to her mistress ought to be able to read their title clear to the leadership of the smart set all the rest of their lives.

When you have heard the same piece of scandal told by three or four different people all claiming to have it straight and better the variations, discrepancies and inconsistencies you ought to be willing to admit that the story we probably largely manufactured out of not more than a grain of truth.

Mrs. Dumont Smith of Kinsley who is in Topeka with Senator Smith for the special session of the legislature has an exquisite mandarin cloak which she bought in Japan last summer. It is the wonder and envy of all the women who see it and have been carried with starting a new fashion for a while. Mrs. Smith's dress is a well known Topeka man who lives at the Copeland was seen parading through the halls in his black and gray striped bathrobe and dog with a white collar. He announced that since the precedent had been established he proposed wearing his mandarin cloak in public whenever he chose and might even follow Mrs. Smith's dress and Mark Twain's example and wear it on the street.

The following New York correspondence in the Kansas City Star: Letters from Paris tell of a charming little tea given by Mrs. Waterman Stone at her apartments there. Mrs. Stone's daughters, Miss Marquette and Miss Elizabeth Stone, are in school in Paris, and by some special arrangement their mother is able to have a small apartment practically in the school, so that they really live with her and at the same time have the advantage of the atmosphere of a French boarding school. Mrs. Stone's guests were, Mrs. A. L. Forsha of Hutchinson, Mrs. Underwood, formerly of Hutchinson and now of Sandwich, Mass., and Miss Sarah Wilder of Hawthatha. Mrs. Forsha and Mrs. Underwood spent the holidays in Paris and now are in the south of France. Miss Wilders is having her second year's work with M. Jean de Reszke. She had on lesson a week with him and one with one of his advanced pupils, who of course continues his master's method. Those who have heard Miss Wilder sing say that her voice has developed wonderfully. She had expected to come home this winter, but her training had reached a critical stage and at M. de Reszke's earnest recommendation she will remain several months longer. Incidentally Miss Wilder has acquired a French accent that is the envy of her American friends in Paris. She says that if the necessity arose she could make a comfortable living by acting as interpreter on shopping trips with bargain hunting Americans.

The last meeting of the Kansas club was in the shape of a smoker and was held in the east room of the Waldorf. There were more than a hundred ex-Kansans there during the evening, many stopping in just long enough for a word of greeting. The Rev. Charles Francis Adams, well known as one of the pioneer Episcopal clergymen of Kansas, made a speech. He now has a parish in Rosville, Staten Island. M. W. Levy, formerly a banker of Wichita, who now, with his sons, has a brokerage office here, spoke, as did Charles Price, rector of the club, T. H. Dinamore, William M. Thatcher, W. P. Gould and Edward Burnett. The annual dinner of the club will be held January 29.

This handsome mourning costume was developed of dull black face cloth. The underbust was of crepe de chine, the skirt of black tulle, fastened up the front, both sides being stitched twice and finished with buttons covered with the material. The skirt is cut in five breadths and has a slight fullness in front and on the sides, but most of the fullness is in the back. A stitched shaped band extends from center front waist line to knee depth, where it separates and encircles the skirt into a flounce.

Heard at the Novelty: People who live in glass houses should not take baths.

The fashionable New Yorkers have deserted the Waldorf for afternoon tea and now everybody who is anybody is at the Plaza. The afternoon hour is compared to a typical bargain sale rush. Women struggle and batter their way through the crowds, climb upon the furniture and are pushed, mauled and have the house and house policemen merely for the sake of sitting in the room where a few society celebrities are drinking tea. The Pomeranians and other fashionable dogs who accompany their fashionable mistresses are, however, not in evidence in the tea room there being a check room especially reserved for them.
